In lieu of a hearing, all parties including the estate and Appellant Wright stipulated to the facts including: that I.V. Burdette, Jr. died without a will, the estate was opened only to settle the personal injury claim, Wright was not listed as an heir nor did she receive any estate distribution, that Wright was the biological child of the decedent, that Wright's mother and Burdette were never married, that Wright was never adopted by Burdette nor did Burdette acknowledge Wright as his daughter in any statutory proceeding in probate or juvenile court, that Burdette never designated Wright as his heir-at-law, and that Burdette was never determined to be Wright's father in any parentage action and none such action was pending at Burdette's death.

Both parties moved for summary judgement with Wright filing a supporting affidavit where she averred that her father acknowledged her as his daughter, never denied the relationship, and that her father visited her when Wright lived with Burdette's mother – her paternal grandmother. Burdette's brother, Herbert, corroborated Wright's affidavit in his own affidavit. Interestingly, Veronica, one of Burdette's two natural children admitted that Wright was introduced to Veronica as a stepsister, but that Burdette never acknowledged Wright as his daughter. After the matter was submitted for decision without a hearing, the probate court magistrate overruled Wright's motion for summary judgment or relief from judgment concluding that she was not an heir of Burdette. Wright filed objections to such decision arguing that the birth certificate was prima facie evidence of paternity, and that she was denied her rights of equal protection. The probate court overruled Wright's objections and upheld the magistrate's decision, concluding that: 1) the birth certificate was insufficient to prove inheritance rights; 2) the undisputed facts established that a parent-child relationship was not established or acknowledged by a marriage between the biological parents of Wright; 3) there was no provision for Wright in Burdette's Will because he died intestate; 4) there was no formal adoption of Wright by Burdette; and 5) there was no acknowledgment of Wright by Burdette in any statutory proceeding.

Upon appeal of the probate court decision by Wright, the appellate court upheld the trial court decision notwithstanding that pursuant to Ohio Revised Code 3705.23(A)(3) and (B)(1), a certified copy of a birth certificate "shall be prima-facia evidence of the facts stated in it in all courts and places," however "prima facie evidence is not conclusive," since "(t)he term denotes evidence which will support, but not require, a verdict in favor of the party offering the evidence," citing Krischbaum v. Dillon, 58 Ohio St. 3d 58, 64, 567 N.E. 2d 1291 (1991). Unless a statute provides otherwise, prima facie evidence creates a rebuttable presumption. Further, it was not enough for Wright to prove that she is, in fact, Burdette's daughter through conclusive DNA testing. Before Wright could claim the status of intestate heir of Burdette, Wright had to prove Burdette acknowledged her as his daughter publicly through paternity proceedings. The law of intestate distribution, Ohio Revised Code 2105.06, establishes a presumption of how a decedent wishes his estate to be distributed in absence of a will. The appellate court determined that once Burdette had acknowledged Wright as his daughter, then Burdette would have known the consequences of his death without a valid will; Burdette could have decided to give Wright more, less, or none of an intestate share by executing a valid will, citing Byrd v. Trenmor, 157 Ohio App 3d 358, 811 NE 2d 549.
